Keeping your Google Business Profile (GBP) holiday hours updated is a small but critical task that signals to Google that your business is actively managed and cares about customer experience.

Google uses special hours as one of its signals to determine if a business is actively maintaining their GBP. An up-to-date profile with accurate holiday hours shows:

- Your business is legitimate and operational
- You care about customer experience
- Your GBP is actively managed (not abandoned)

This seemingly minor detail contributes to your overall local SEO authority and can impact your visibility in local search results. Just like maintaining your GBP Services and other profile elements, holiday hours are part of demonstrating consistent, professional management.

Creating a Management System

Since Google restricts how far in advance you can set holiday hours, you need a systematic approach to keep them updated throughout the year. This type of proactive management is exactly what helps reduce client churn by demonstrating ongoing value and attention to detail.

Recommended Schedule

Set a recurring calendar reminder for the 1st of every other month to:

- Review upcoming holidays
- Update all client GBPs with special hours
- Verify previously entered hours are still accurate

Common Holidays to Track

- New Year's Day
- Martin Luther King Jr. Day
- Presidents' Day

💡 Pro Tip: Some businesses may also need to account for religious holidays, local events, or industry-specific closures. Know your client's schedule!

Small details like holiday hours might seem insignificant, but they're part of the larger picture of maintaining an optimized, trustworthy online presence for local businesses.
